Application Review Q&A

What happens after the application is submitted?

When you submit your application package, a staff planner will be assigned to your project. The planner will check your application for completeness. State Law allows cities 30 days to review applications for completeness. We will notify you in writing of any outstanding items.

After the application is deemed complete, what is the review procedure, and how long does it take?

Once staff deems your application complete, the application will be scheduled for review before the Project Review Committee. After the Project Review Committee review, the path your case takes depends on the level of review your application requires.

- Level A projects require no public hearing and are at staff level with the Community Development Director as the Final approval body.
- Level B and C projects require that a public notice be mailed to the owners of surrounding properties within a 300 foot radius, advising them of the project, and of the date and time of the hearing before the Zoning Administrator or the Planning Commission. You must submit the names and addresses of surrounding property owners along with your application materials. Staff will prepare the notice and complete the mailing. See the checklist for details. Upon final review, projects are subject to a 30-day appeal period.

An application processing flowchart is included on the next page, which outlines the procedures for the three levels of review, and includes approximate time frames for each stage.

When does the Design Review Board and Planning Commission meet?

The Design Review Board meets on the second Thursday of each month at 4:00 p.m. The Planning Commission meets the first and third Monday of each month at 7:00 p.m.; all meetings are held in the Council Chambers at City Hall. The Zoning Administrator hearings are scheduled on a case-by-case basis.

What about environmental review?

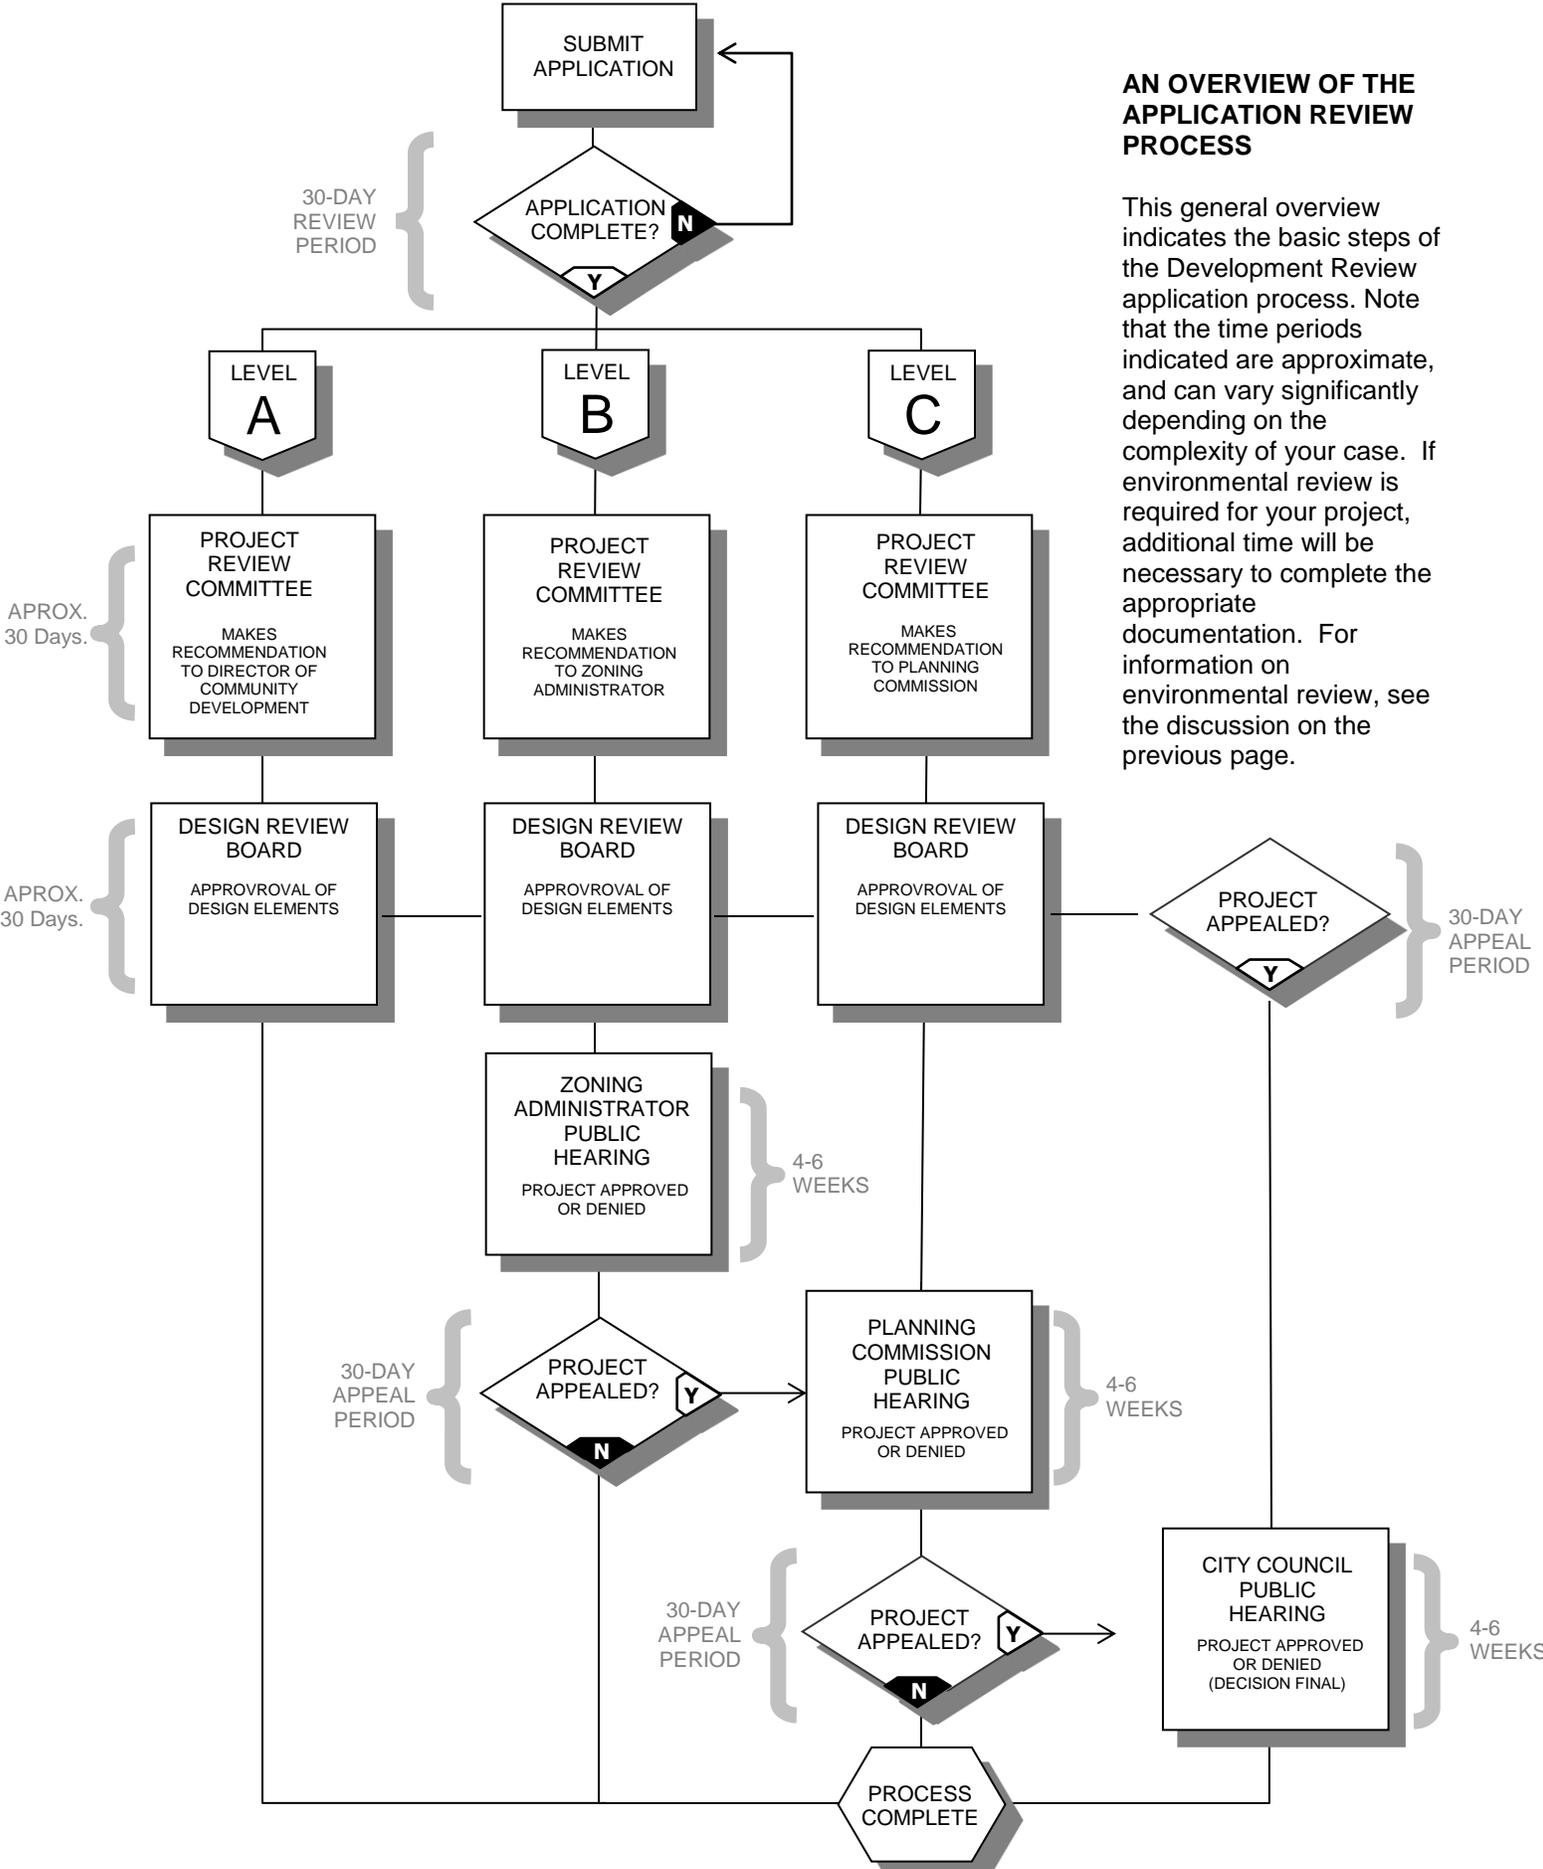

If your project requires environmental review under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) additional time will be required for staff to prepare environmental documents, including an environmental initial study and public notices. The amount of time needed can vary considerably depending on the size and complexity of your project. Your staff planner will advise you if environmental review is required. Details of required submittals are found in the attached checklist.

Some background on environmental review

A state law known as the California Environmental Quality Act requires that all but minor development projects undergo a rigorous environmental review. The Environmental Initial Study discussed above is an outgrowth of this legislation, and provides a consistent framework in which to analyze impacts such as traffic generation, noise, air quality, odor, and aesthetics.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE APPLICATION REVIEW PROCESS

This general overview indicates the basic steps of the Development Review application process. Note that the time periods indicated are approximate, and can vary significantly depending on the complexity of your case. If environmental review is required for your project, additional time will be necessary to complete the appropriate documentation. For information on environmental review, see the discussion on the previous page.
